

The Scala Theatre, 58 Charlotte Street, London in 1912

The Scala Theatre on the corner of Scala Street and Charlotte Street was knocked down in 1969, just another part of the huge redevelopment of London during the sixties – a time when town-planners planned seemingly without sentiment. The 1,139 seat Theatre had been built in 1904 but a theatre had been on the site since 1772. It is now a rather drab nondescript office block – another town-planner habit of the sixties.

THE SCALA THEATRE.

The Scala Theatre, 58 Charlotte Street, London in 1912

The Scala Theatre, Charlotte Street, London W1 in 1912

The Scala Theatre, in Scala Street, London W1, was the original theatre where “The London Scout Gang Show” was performed, from 1932 to 1938. In 1939 “The London Gang Scout Show” that was in production was cancelled due to the outbreak of WWII in September 1939.